Maureen Johnson, our Art Tutor

Here are Alison and Padma hard at work shaping flowers from polymer clay. Shortly after this photo Alison went into hospital for serious surgery but we're all delighted to hear she is home and recovering well, though it will take some time. We definitely miss her beautifully calm, unflustered manner in knowing where everything, but Lola is doing a sterling job in the meantime.

It was lovely to see Maureen back with us, well recovered from a long period in hospital before Christmas. Without her to steer us we were like fish floundering on the beach for the couple of sessions without her!

Maureen really must have the patience of Job because I doubt that any of us have any pretence to be great artists, but hey – we all enjoy it and that is the best part of U3A. We've tried our hand at water colours, acrylic paint, calligraphy, perspective and now venturing into 3D flowers and collages.
